DETAILED ACTION

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1,2,11,12,13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being rejected by Futamura et al. in U.S. Patent No. 4,800,248. Futamura discloses method and apparatus for applying an erosion pulse in the tool electrode, acquiring a voltage during the erosion phase (see column 6, lines 59 to column 7, line 16), and detecting an instantaneous interruption (see waveform V₂ in figure 1A and column 4, lines 18-34) that is clearly asymptotic. Regarding claims 2 and 12, the language in these claims does not preclude the method or apparatus from using the voltage applied to the tool as recited in claim 1. Regarding claim 13, Futamura discloses (see column 4, lines 15-17) apparatus that “when an instantaneous interruption of discharge current takes place, the discharge current is immediately cut off for a predetermined duration”.

3. Claims 3-10,14,15 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Ullmann et al. in U.S. Patent No. 4,072,842 has a pulse generator with an envelope generator.
